Dear Minister Barnett,

You wrote to us, so we may expect that you will read our responses and reply to them.

Your proposal to use the 'waste' from the destruction of Tasmania's natural forests and wildlife habitat is morally bankrupt. As a lover of bushwalking in Tasmanian forests, you ought to take time this summer to reflect on burning wild forest components to produce nature-destroying energy in a state with no need it.

History will judge the government on whether it protected what was left of our wild and scenic forests or simply added to their export by burning a proportion so profiteers could make more money.

Don't do it.

Yours sincerely,

Bob Brown.
